

Quiz Questions | Answers

Module 7 | Lesson 7.2 – The useState Hook

1. What are the two values in the array returned from the useState Hook?

- A: A state value of the previous component render and a state value in the component's current render state.
- B: A function responsible for creating a state value and a function responsible for updating the state value.
- C: An object of predefined state values and a function responsible for updating all object state values.
- D: A state value and a function responsible for updating the state value.

Answer: D - A state value and a function responsible for updating the state value.

2. What purpose does the only argument of the useState Hook provide?

- A: It is a callback function that is run whenever the state value is updated.
- B: It sets the initial value of the state property being created.
- C: It is a callback function that is run when the component first renders.
- D: The useState hook does not accept any arguments.

Answer: B - It sets the initial value of the state property being created.

3. The useState Hook accepts a type variable that allows us to specify the type of the state value being created.

- A: True
- B: False

Answer: A - True